Harold:

Here are Xeroxes of a few photos in the following book:

National Broadcasting Company, There Was a President (prepared and pruduced by The Ridge Press; publ. by Random House; 1966)

I include only these, for the other pictures either are of no importance or are known to you.

The text is a severely abbreviated account of what NBC-TV broadcast in the first few days after the assassination. It contains a few interesting references, but of no great value, for they are severely shortened versions of information that is more complete elsewhere.

Don't bother commenting to me on these, for I send them strictly for your information.
